Waiting.

Sweet childhood with thy painted toys,
Oblivious of those fleeting joys,
O, sing and sport, for soon, alas!
Those bright and joyous days will pass,
But wouldst thou know thy latent powers,
That slumber through those sunny hours,
In vain thou shalt inquire of fate.
Full many a year yet thou must wait.

Ambitious youth with eager eyes,
Looks forward in those halcyon days
To laurels bright he hopes to gain,
But long he struggles for in vain;
Like mirage oft before his eyes,
Appears the goal and envied prize;
He still pursues the alluring bait,
But ere he grasps it long must wait.

Matured manhood with like zest,
Pursues his phantom with the rest;
But with more obstacles he copes,
Though not less ardent are his hopes.
Advancing years now trials bring,
While older ones around him cling,
With life alone these terminate,
But for deliverance he must wait.

Old age, with snowy locks, appears,
Beneath his weight of cares and years
Subdued are now ambition's fires,
And higher hopes his soul inspires.
Almost within his eager gaze
Are dazzling gleams of heavenly rays;
And ere he sees the "Golden Gate."
He hath not now long to wait.

A MISUNDERSTANDING.

"Why don't he come?" said Lillian Bourne, peeping earnestly between the boughs of the monster lilac-bush, whose purple plumes waved to and fro in the evening breeze. "Oh, why don t he come? I can't possibly be mistaken He said on Tuesday evening at seven and it's twenty minutes past, by grandfather's big clock; and, oh, dear!" with a sigh that stirred the bunch of pansies pinned on her left shoulder, "there isn't a soul in sight!"

By all the signs and symptoms Lillian's little pink ear should have burned that evening, for they were all talking about her at Miss Lorinda Larkins' tea-party in Dover street.

"Oh, she's a born coquette!" said Miss "Lorinda. Two lumps of sugar did you say, or one, Betsey Young? She can't help it. It's in her nature. Don't you remember, Mrs. Pepperfield, what a flirt her mother was before her? But she'll never play fast and loose with Gilbert Dawson again—that I'll go bail!"

"Oh do tell us all about it, Miss Larkins!" said the widow Peabody, with her mouth full of chicken salad.

"Well, if you won't repeat it—"

"Repeat it! We! Never, as long as we live!" was the reply that went around the tea-table in one accent.

"Of course," added Miss Lorinda, "it's all quite private and confidential, between ourselves. But it was at the Medbury's party. What business the Medbury's have to give parties, with bought ice cream and two violins and a harp, I don't know. Every one is perfectly aware that there's a mortgage on the place, and that her dressmaker's bill ain't paid. But that ain't neither here nor there. I was there, in my dyed green gown, trimmed with Aunt Liddy's old English lace, and I was a-lookin' at the big orange-tree in the conservatory—that's another of Mrs. Medbury's sinful extravagances—when I see Lily Bourne, in her white frock, on the other side of the bank of flowers, a-gigglin' and a-whisperin' with Squire Rufus Darling!"

"My!" ejaculated the other ladies, with open mouths.

"And up came Mrs. Medbury, all in a smile—she smiles twice as often as before, since she got them new false teeth—and whispers in her ear. And says Lily, out loud, says she, 'Oh, I can't! I'm engaged to Mr. Darling!'"

"No," cried Mrs. Pepperfield.

"I heard it with these very ears," solemnly answered Miss Lorinda.

"Engaged!" shrieked Mrs. Young, whose own dimpled neice was even then laying siege to Mr. Darling's adamantine heart.

"Engaged!" repeated Miss Lorinda Larkins.

"And she keeping company with Gilbert Dawson!" exclaimed the widow Peabody breathlessly.

"But she won't never trifle with him no more," added Miss Lorinda, with ill-disguised admiration. "For I met Gilbert, yesterday afternoon, and I asked him about his mother's rheumatism, and what the New York doctor said about it; and he never took no notice of my questions. You know that absent way young men have when they're in love. 'Excuse me, Miss Larkins' says he, 'but I'm a little in a hurry,' a-lookin' right over the top of my head, as if I wasn't there at all. 'If you're goin' to Miss Bourne's,' says I, 'there ain't no such terrible hurry.' Says he, 'What do you mean?' And he looked at me sharp enough this time. 'Hain't you heerd? She's engaged to Squire Darling,' says I. And says he, 'It can't be possible!' Says I, 'I heerd it from her own lips; and all Pekasset's talkin' about it,' says I. The idea of a young creeter like that sellin' herself for money and a fine house. For everybody knows,' says I, 'that that's all that Rufe Darling's got to recommend him; and he's old enough to be her father into the bargain,' says I. And he just turned his horse and kerridge around, without ever having the politeness to say 'good-by,' and druv' off like Jehu in the opposite direction."

"Young men ain't accountable when they're in love," sighed Miss Polonia Johnson, who was suspected of being the poetess who wrote the love sonnets in the Pekasset Weekly Oracle.

"I ain't one that meddles with other folks' affairs," said Miss Lorinda, viciously biting off a piece of soda-biscuit and butter; "but I shall never encourage flirting with any man, while you're engaged to another. It's clean ag'in my principles!"

And before the next day's sun had set, everybody in Pekasset knew all about Miss Bourne's engagement to Squire Rufus Darling.

"Don't mind it, Gilbert," said old Mrs. Dawson. "Do not let a girl's silly caprices break your heart."

He lay on the sofa in the pretty little "keeping-room," where the floor was carpeted with blue, because blue was Lillian Bourne's favorite color, and the walls were papered with bunches of white-and-gold lilies, because the lily was her name-flower.

Fringes of pale mignonette hung on the window-boxes, and a canary chirped gleefully in the sunshine; for Gilbert had made his home beautiful because he wanted Lillian to like it.

"Mother," said the young man, with a tremble in his voice, "I loved her!"

"But you were never actually betrothed," spoke the old lady, pitifully.

"Not in words, mother; but we understood each other, and— No matter; it's over and past now," said Gilbert, sadly.

Mrs. Dawson pressed his hand with true maternal sympathy.

"My poor boy," she whispered. "Try and forget her."

"I can't do that, mother. But," with a sudden resolve, "I'll go away from here. I'll accept my Uncle Ravenburn's invitation to go with him to those old Mexican cities, where he is to sketch and paint. I'm not much of an artist myself, but I can manage to while the time away somehow. At all events, I can't stay here and see Lillian married to that pompous fellow, Darling!"

He had not been gone ten minutes to the village, after that momentous conversation, when there came the tiniest of knocks to the door, and in response to Mrs. Dawson's "Come in!" there entered—Miss Lillian Bourne herself.

Fresh from the spring woods, with a basket of the pale pink, trailing arbutus she herself had gathered, in her hand.

But she paused on the threshold as she saw the hardening lines around the mouth of Gilbert's mother.

"Am I in the way?" she asked, timidly. "Have I come at the wrong time?"

"Pray walk in," said Mrs. Dawson, trying to simulate the cordiality which her soul refused to offer to the girl who had broken her son's heart.

"I found these arbutus-stars in the woods," said she. "I knew you were fond of them. May I put them in a saucer of water for you?"

"Mrs. Dawson assented, still without much warmth of manner.

"I am much obliged to you," said she, coldly.

"I hope Gilbert is well," said Lillian, the color flaming hotly up into her cheek.

"Quite well, I thank you!" said Mrs. Dawson. "He is going to Mexico with my brother, Mr. Ravenburn, next week, and is consequently very busy, because— Why, what is the matter Miss Bourne?"

For Lillian had grown deadly pale, and uttered a little cry.

"Its—its my tooth," she faltered "It has been filled; and sometimes the cold air makes it jump so dreadfully! I think I'll go home and put a little oil of peppermint on it."

And so Lily slipped away, and cried all the way home, behind her veil.

But by the time she reached her own little room, however, sorrow had given place to anger.

"What have I done that he should treat me so?" she asked herself, with indignant heart-beats.

And then she gathered up all his presents—the bunch of withered rose-buds, tied with the faded blue ribbon, the little agate cross, the copy of "Aldrich's Poems," the peach-stone basket that he had carved himself, and the glittering crystals which he had brought her from Diamond Island, and the two or three letters and notes he had written her at one time and another.

"I will send them back!" she declared. "He may take them to Mexico if he likes. I don't want them any longer!"

By a strange coincidence, however, as she was setting forth to the village post office with the neatly-tied packet, she met Mr. Dawson himself. He stopped. She stayed her footsteps, also. They both colored, celestial rosy-red.

"I am very glad I met you before you went to Mexico!" said Miss Bourne, haughtily.

"Are you?" said Gilbert Dawson, trying his best to appear like a statue of ice.

"I wish to return you these things," said Lillian. "Of course, they are of no consequence, but I thought perhaps you would like them back again."

"Thanks!" said Gilbert, stiffly. "You were right. It was exactly what I was going to ask you for."

"It's a pity you ever gave them to me, since they meant so little," said Lily, with a quivering lip.

"It's hardly worth while to discuss that question now," observed Gilbert. "I can only hope that you will be very happy with Squire Darling. And—"

"I?" cried Lily—"with Squire Darling? Why, what on earth have I got to do with Squire Darling?"

"Aren't you engaged to him?" asked Gilbert.

"I?" echoed Lily, once again.

"Lily, don't trifle with me," sternly uttered Dawson. "I am in earnest. Have you promised to be Rufus Darling's wife, or have you not?"

"Of course I haven't," said Lily, between tears and laughter. "How could I, when he never asked me? And if he had—"

"Yes!" cried Gilbert, with kindling eyes. "And if he had—"

"I should have said No!" whispered Lily.

"Why?" demanded Gilbert, imperiously.

Lily hung down her pretty head.

"Because," she faltered—"because I don't like him. Because I love somebody else!"

Something there was in her look and tone that set Gilbert Dawson's pulses to leaping madly through his veins.

"Lily!" he cried—"my Lily—tell me whom it is that you love!"

And she answered, in a paroxysm of blushes:

"You, Gilbert!"

Miss Lorinda Larkins and her friends were utterly amazed when they heard that Gilbert and Lily were to be married as soon as Miss Peckham could get the wedding dress ready.

"Well," Miss Lorinda cried, "this does beat all. We all s'posed, as much as could be, that you was to be Mrs. Squire Darling."

"Oh, yes," said Lillian, calmly, "I heard some of that silly rumor. Some gossip heard me say at Mrs. Medbury's party that I was engaged to Squire Darling. So I was, but it was for a quardrille only. It's surprising how little it takes to set the silly tongues of Pekasset wagging."

Miss Lorinda turned very red. She would have liked to box Lillian Bourne's ears, but she dared not. All she could say was:

"Oh, indeed! Well, folks will talk!"

—Helen Forest Graves.

"Quid Times?"

The boy reached the Rubicon of the watermelon patch, cucumus citrulus, and long and earnestly he looked up and down the dusty road, stretching away in a long perspective of dusky yellow down the long avenues of maple and walnut (juglans nigra). He peered between the weather-beaten rails of the old worm fence, and bent his eager gaze upon the field of corn, and saw between its emerald rows the yellow pumpkins shine. "The pompion," he muttered, "cucurbita pepo, a culinary vegetable of the order cucurbitaceæ; nutricious, but not ravishingly edible in a state of nature." He listened for the sound of a human voice, the baying of a dog, the echo of a footfall. No sound fell on his listening ears. He was alone in the world, far from human gaze or human aid. The awful sense of utter loneliness, of voiceless, lifeless solitude that brooded over him, rather pleased him. It was what he had waited for. One more swift glance up and down the road, and he said:

"The die is cast. Heaven helps those who help themselves."

And lightly springing over the fence he started to help himself without waiting for heaven to ask him which he preferred, heart or rind. But his confidence was not suffered to go unrewarded, for while heaven would not come itself, it sent its last, best gift, a noble woman, with an arm as big as a churn, and a voice as big as both her arms to help him. And she helped the lad over the fence so swiftly that long, long after he had stopped running, he was still wondering how, in the brief space of interval that had elapsed between her coming and his going, she found time to raise eleven distinct and well-defined welts on his back and legs with a cross-cut black-snake whip.

VOLCANIC SURPRISES.

The Theory of Eruptions—How they Arise—Deluges Caused by Snow.

For a volcano once supposed to be inactive, Vesuvius has prepared some lively surprises for the dwellers in its neighborhood. Its latest surprise has been to shake up a railroad and destroy several houses. The people of Herculaneum and Pompeii thought Vesuvius extinct until one day it proved in a very thorough manner that it could still be roused to activity. Since then no one has been deceived by its quietude.

Other volcanoes besides Vesuvius have from time to time indulged in what seems to be the general volcano propensity of creating surprises. Thus no one would expect to have a mass of rock of some 3,000 cubic feet suddenly descend upon them from the sky. But people living nine miles from Cotopaxi were on one occasion treated to such a surprise. The Carthaginians, when they set out against Syracuse, were not prepared to cross the fiery river which, to their surprise, intercepted their march at Mount Etna. They had no boats with which to cross it.

The great eruption of Tomboro surprised people for some 970 miles around, the distance at which the force of the explosion was heard. They wondered what was the matter until they learned of the eruption from one of the twenty-six persons who were saved out of a population of 12,000.

Surprises of another kind, fearful deluges, are the first indications in many South American districts that volcanoes whose peaks are in the region of perpetual snow have suddenly become active, the deluges being caused by the melting of great masses of snow.

It must also be a surprise of a beautiful, though fearful kind, to see a fiery fountain play to a height of 700 feet from the side of a mountain. Such a fountain on Mauna Loa in 1852 was a magnificent illustration of volcanic fissure, the pressure of lava at the crater being relieved by this new outlet. The cracks often seen on volcanoes, which form dikes radiating from the center, are created in this manner. Small extra craters, volcanoes on volcanoes, which gradually become cone shaped, are found along these fissures.

Another surprise. There is no flame in volcanic eruptions, as is generally represented most graphically in chromos. The suppositious flames are simply a reflection of the lava on the cloud of ashes and cinders.

The islands which have occasionally surprised the inhabitants along the coast of the Mediterranean by appearing suddenly under their very eyes are the result of volcanic action. But probably the greatest surprise connected with this subject is the formation of volcanoes. A volcano is originally nothing but a hole in the ground, formed often at no elevation by the swelling and breaking of an earth bubble. The mountain which springs up around this opening is formed by accumulations of successive eruptions. The great age of volcanoes which, like Mauna Loa and Mount Etna, are 14,000 and 11,000 feet high, can be readily appreciated from this fact, and from the further fact that Etna had attained almost its present height when it was observed by Greek writers 2,500 years ago.

A volcano is a furnace on a magnificent scale, the lava which it ejects being molten rock. This rock is so thoroughly fused by some volcanoes that the lava is as thin as honey, and flows with a velocity of fifteen miles an hour. Sometimes it is spun out in long, glassy threads by the action of bursting gas bubbles.

While there are two kinds of eruptions, the quiet and the explosive, there are many theories regarding the heat which fuses the rocks into lava. Many think that the interior of the earth is in a liquid condition, but the better opinion seems to be that the lava occurs in subterranean lakes. But the theorists agree that proximate cause of volcanic eruption is the contact of water with molten rock.

Peanut Flour.

The despised peanut promises to become a very important product of the country. It yields a return already of over $3,000,000 per annum, and its growth is rapidly increasing. It is not only eaten in the shell roasted, and fed to hogs, but it recently has been ground into a flour which makes a peculiarly palatable biscuit. It is also being used in pastry, where it takes the place of cocoanut, and is not only oily and richer, but healthier and better every way. The peanut is easily grown, produces an immense crop, and is destined to be widely consumed, not only for cattle, but in the form of flour and pastry for human beings.

THE DIVINING ROD.

Something for the Scientists—The Singular Power of the Sixth Sense.

"The time is coming," said Mr Charles Latimer, "when scientific gentlemen and others will be compelled to recognize the sixth sense. I read your article on dreams, and desire to add another instance which I can vouch for. I have an aunt living in Georgetown, D. C. A short time since, while engaged in knitting, she fell asleep in her chair. She awoke suddenly, and, turning to a relative, said: 'Mrs. Abbott has been thrown from her carriage at Bladensburg, and has had both her arms broken.' Mrs. Abbott is a very intimate friend of my aunt but is not a relative. Two hours later a messenger announced to my aunt's household that Mrs. Abbott had been thrown from her carriage at Bladensburg and that both of her arms had been broken. No, sir, I believe—yes, I know—that I can go to Brooklyn village, examine the blood of the burglar who attempted to rob Mayor Jones and whom the mayor wounded, and, by the aid of the sixth sense, discover the thief. I have a book, published in France over two hundred years ago, in which is related the discovery of a murderer, who, during his crime, was wounded, and whose blood stained the ground where the struggle occurred. A detective, who had discovered what I term the sixth sense, examined the blood and by means of the electrical current traced the murderer to a prison. He entered the jail, looked over those confined therein, and, placing his hand upon the shoulder of a burly fellow, said: 'This is the man.' The detective took the prisoner back to the scene of the crime and the felon confessed.

"The divining rod is only another exemplification of the existence of a power not yet recognized. With a piece of witch hazel I discovered the coal mines which bear that name. I told the number of feet a shaft would have to be sunk in order to reach the coal and even gave the thickness of the vein. Yet people say there is nothing in it and that the divining rod is a superstition. If I have an idea that brings me in money, then the public pronounce it a good one. Money is the foundation upon which people base their declarations. I got $5000 for locating the Witch Hazel mines, and am paid besides twelve and a half cents for every ton of coal taken out of them. Superintendent Whitelaw, of the water works, did not credit my ability to locate water pipe. He came to my residence one evening, and I went with him through several streets, and with the aid of the divining rod told him exactly where the pipes were located. I offered to make a map of all the pipes in the city, giving their connections and branches. Finally he asked me to go with him to the Public square. I traced several pipes for him there, when he asked me to find the big one. I not only found it, but told him how far it was below the surface of the earth. I have a letter in my possession from Mr. Whitelaw verifying my experiments. I once went to the residence of a noted scientist in Philadelphia where I made another test of the power of the divining rod. I walked across his library floor and traced a pipe. He said I was mistaken, as there were no pipes of any description beneath the floor. I insisted that there was one at least, and told him I should be compelled to leave his house with the firm conviction that he was wrong and I right. Finally he made an examination in the cellar beneath and discovered a tin pipe fifteen inches beneath the floor, the existence of which he had forgotten. The divining rod shows the superiority of mind over matter. I stand over a vein of iron ore, and the rod turns. My sixth sense realizes the presence of a mineral, and the realization moves the switch. Here is a feeling that must sooner or later be recognized. Men cry fraud and superstition, but I know what I know. I know that the switch turns when I walk above a metal, that it is indisputable, and to me satisfactory. The same sense comes into play when people dream of certain things which are happening to friends, or are about to. I prove the correctness of my theories to men. They say yes, and look mystified. If I catch them in public they throw their heads back and decline to believe, simply because they are fearful of their friends' ridicule. But the time is coming when all must believe."

—Cleveland Leader.

M. Paul Trasenter, of Liege, gives the production of coal in the world in 1882 as follows, in metrical tons: Great Britain, 158,800,000; United States, 88,100,000; Germany, 65,400,000; France, 20,800,000; Belgium, 17,500,000; Austro-Hungary, 18.000.000.

THIS AND THAT.

New York in summer uses from 8,000 to 10,000 tons of ice a day.

Great attention has been bestowed in Germany within the last two years upon the cultivation of the common nettle. From it an immense number of articles are made, and there is scarcely a branch of textile industry in which it cannot be used. The growing of nettles has become part of the business of every small farmer. The crop never fails, no weather affects it, and as it requires planting only once in every ten or fifteen years, the labor of cultivation is small; and as it needs but three or four inches of earth, many a piece of unprofitable land, even old quarries and gravel-pits, are thus turned to account. A manufacturer in Dresden has succeeded in obtaining from it the finest thread known in the trade, so fine that 100,000 metres of it (or rather more than sixty miles of length) weigh only two and a half pounds.

A curious kind of weed which grows in the Arkansas valley has often proved misleading to sportsmen. It is shaped like a ball and varies in size from one foot or less in diameter to five or six feet, some specimens being as tall as a man. It grows upon a small stem, which is, however, stout enough to bear the mass till it has ripened and dried, when a puff of wind will blow it over and snap the slender support. Then it is that every gust of wind sends it rolling over the prairie, bounding over bushes and rocks with the greatest elasticity and lightness. When the wind is strong and high these tumbling weeds present a most peculiar appearance as they bound from rock to rock, and in more than one instance hunters have mistaken them for bisons and felt considerable irritation at the impossibility of bringing them within range of their guns.

Doctors are known to differ, and as a result it sometimes seems just as well for individuals to consult their own convenience instead of their physicians. For example, in the matter of sleeping, some doctors say lie with the head to the north, others hold a contrary opinion, and now that long journeys are made by rail it is amusing to find two eminent authorities differing as to the safest way to pass the night. A German doctor asserts that to lie with the feet to the engine draws the blood from the brain to the feet and produces cerebral anæmia, followed by sleep; whereas if the traveller lies with his head in that position, cerebral hyperæmia is the result and sleep is impossible. An American authority, on the other hand, holds a directly contrary opinion, and urges his patients to take their positions for the night with the head towards the locomotive and so slumber in peace. As sleeping in a railway car is difficult under any circumstances, one might as well try both methods.

For many years a club existed and flourished in a small English town in Lancashire, known as the Oyster and Parched Pea Club. Among the staff of officers was one known as Osystericus, whose duty it was to order and look after the oysters, which then came by fleet from London. The club rejoiced in a poet laureate or rhymesmith, and a Cellarius, who looked after the wine. Among the rules and articles of the club was one enjoining that "a barrel of oysters be provided every Monday night during the winter, at the equal expense of the members, to be opened exactly at 7.30 o'clock." Every member on having a son born was to pay a gallon, for a daughter half a gallon, of port to his brethren of the club within a month of the birth of such child, at any public house he should choose.

The value of trees in a city can scarcely be exaggerated. In Italy it is an offence against the law to cut them down, as it is found that an outbreak of fever usually follows any clearing away of the trees. And apart from this, how much they add to the beauty of any city. There seems to be an inseparable connection between the trees and drinking fountains in the municipal mind, a fact upon which the public are also to be congratulated. In Brooklyn, where very little is done for the city by the authorities, a private association exists for the improvement of the city, and great attention is paid by the members to the question of the planting of trees. It is little short of a crime to allow handsome trees to be mutilated and destroyed, and yet it is done every day. Quite recently a telegraph company, finding the trees in a certain portion of Brooklyn an obstacle to the stretching of their wire, had no compunction whatever in decapitating several of them, cutting their heads off in the most reckless manner. Instances of this kind are constantly occurring, and ought to be forbidden by law.

Life.

Life! I know not what thou art,
But know that thou and I must part;
And when, or how, or where we met
I own to me's a secret yet.
But this know, when thou art fled,
Where'er they lay these limbs, this head,
No clod so valueless shall be
As all that then remains of me.
O, whither, whither dost thou fly,
Where bend unseen thy trackless course,
And in this strange divorce,
Ah, tell me where I must seek this compound I?

To the vast ocean of empyreal flame,
From whence thy essence came,
Dost thou thy flight pursue, when freed
From matter's base, encumbering weed?
Or dost thou, hid from sight,
Wait, like some spellbound knight,
Through blank, oblivious years the appointed hour
To break thy trance and reassume thy power?
Yet canst thou without thought or feeling be?
O, say, what art thou when no more thou'st thee?

Life! we've been long together.
Through pleasant and through cloudy weather;
'Tis hard to part when friends are dear—
Perhaps 'twill cost a sigh a tear;
Then steal away, give little warning,
Choose thine own time;
Say not good night—but in some brighter clime
Bid me good morning.

HUMOROUS.

A baby-carriage is sometimes called a crycyle.

"I know many distinguished persons," says a facetious business man; "nearly all my debtors are men of note."

It is a mean wretch who will slyly drop a hair-switch in a car loaded with women, and then smile as he sees every woman make a grab for the back of her head when she notices it.

A reporter who had just done his first boat-race was rebuked by the city editor for not mentioning anywhere that the oarsmen "took water," and replied that none of them took water. They all took gin.

"See here!" exclaimed the irate agent to the dancing-master who hired the hall, "are you going to pay me any rent any time this year?" "Well," replied the "Professor," "I haven't any money just now, but I'm taking steps to raise some."

Nothing more disgusts a party of Newport fox-hunters than to have an old cow get ahead of them and go racing and snorting along, with her tail in the air and terror in her soul. It looks as though they were chasing the cow, and that's not an English custom.

The British Medical Journal, in discussing blushing and its scientific cause, has become sadly mixed on red cheeks and red noses. They are two very different reds. One is a charming indication of confusion or innocence, and the other means something else. The British medical editor should study young girls more and his assortment of tonics less.

A Salt Lake merchant sold an Indian an opera glass, and as he tied up the purchase congratulated his dusky customer on the rapid progress he was making toward civilization. A few minutes later the gentle savage threw the glass back upon the merchant's hands. He had discovered that they were not a double-barreled flask, out of which he could take two drinks at the same time.

A. T. Stewart's Cathedral.

The great Cathedral of the Incarnation and St. Paul's school at Garden City, L. I., have been completed. The cathedral has been five years in course of erection and the school nearly three years. The cost, defrayed by the Stewart estate, has been nearly $3,000,000. The interior of the cathedral presents a beautiful appearance. The altar was made in Antwerp, Belgium. It is composed of statuary, marble and eight panels. The windows of stained glass were made in London. They represent the incarnation or the childhood of Christ. The glass in the windows of the mausoleum was also made in London. These windows represent the passion, death, resurrection and appearance of Christ in his last days.

The dean's seat is of carved mahogany, and was made in Philadelphia. The pulpit and lectern are of bronze. The organ cost $100,000. It is in five parts, and each part is played from the single key-board, by which the chimes in the tower are also played from the organ by electrical attachments. The organ cases are of mahogany, carved in harmony. The cases and stalls together cost $50,000. The crypt is of marble, and every country is represented in its construction. It does not contain the remains of the late A. T. Stewart. The basement is fitted up with a Sunday chapel. The staircases are all of iron. The walls and steeple of the cathedral are of Bellevue (N. J.) stone; the interior columns are ornamented with bronze foliage. St. Paul's school is believed to be the finest educational structure in the world. It has accommodations for 500 pupils.

Pay Your Taxes.

We are now in October, and Saturday next, the 6th inst., is the last day on which citizens can pay State or county taxes to qualify them as voters for the November election.

All who have not paid a State or county tax within two years must pay such a tax on or before Saturday next, or they will be disqualified as voters at the next general election. Pay your taxes.

Judge Hoadley's health is nearly restored and he has returned to Ohio. The Judge expects to be actively engaged in the canvass until election day. The prospects of the democrats to carry the Buckeye state are very promising. The defection among the colored vote is making the republicans feel very uneasy. It is said that Foraker, their candidate for Governor, left college when a student, because a colored student was admitted.

The New York World thinks that Judge Hoadley, the democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio, will have at least 10,000 majority.

Post Master General Gresham shows his spite against democratic little Millheim by sending old postage stamps to our efficient Post Master to be used under the new law. Guess he would continue to impose the old, highpriced green stamps on us if the democratic congress did not stand in the way. But never mind, the JOURNAL will get even with the big-feeling, radical official, sure. We'll spot him when he runs for President—then—well, he will be just nowhere.

THE Delaware County Record, a staunch Republican newspaper, published in Republican Chairman Cooper's own county, thus fixes the responsibility where it belongs: Governor Pattison used but rightful prerogative and constitutional authority when he called the Legislature together to perform a neglected duty; the Senate majority exceeded its rightful authority, unnessarily prolonged the extra session by its persistent and dogged refusal to confer and co-operate with the House upon the apportionment issue, and committed the additional folly of issuing its "ultimatum" that it would have its own way or there should be no apportionment, as made and provided by the laws and the constitution.

Not an off Year by Any Means.

From Sam. Hudson's Philadelphia Truth.

This is not an "off" year in Pennsylvania politics. It is decidedly an "on" year. The people have a greater stake in the struggle now going on between the two parties in the legislature than they have ever had in a political contest since Pennsylvania was a state. The life of their form of government is in jeopardy. If the constitution can be defied in its mandate respecting the apportionment it may be defied in any other of its mandates. If the people can be denied their right to just representation they can also be denied any other of their rights. The organic law must be held together in all its parts or it will fall to broken fragments. Like a chain the constitution is only as strong as its weakest link. The republican stalwarts have resolved that since Cameron's chances of being returned to the United States senate will be lessened by obedience to the constitution, therefore the constitution shall not be obeyed. It is this link in the fundamental law that is being strained in the legislature. The democratic party is striving to hold the constitutional chain together. The republican stalwarts are trying to break it. The people must give their strength to the democratic party or the constitution will be riven in twain. There can be no doubt about what they will do. They are alive to the question before them. They cannot be deceived by the cry that this is an an "off" year. They know that it is an "on" year, in which they must determine whether they will be "off" with the constitution or with the Cameron obstructionists. They will soon decide. The obstructionists must go. Turn the conspirators out.

Butler Nominated.

BOSTON, Sept. 26.—The democratic state convention to-day was called to order by Jonas H. French, chairman of the state committee, and the officers of the state committee were made the officers of the convention. In his address Mr. French spoke at some length on national affairs, reviewed the recent address of the republican state convention; refered to the administration of Governor Butler in the highest terms, detailing the important events that have occurred during the past year, and predicted a great victory for the democratic party throughout the country. At the conclusion there was a generous applause. There was some heated discussion over the appointment of the fifteen members of the state central committee. A motion to nominate General Butler for governor by acclamation was unanimously carried by a rising vote and was followed by cheers. The committee appointed to nominate the balance of the state ticket reported as follows: For lieutenant governor, Frederick O. Prince, of Boston; secretary of state, Charles Markle, of Springfield; for treasurer and receiver, General C. H. Ingalls, of New Bedford; for attorney general, John W. Cummings, of Fall River, and for auditor, John Hopkins, of Millburn.

THE Philadelphia Times after abusing the Democratic House without stint for the last two months or more now strikes a reasonably fair average, considering its enmity to the democrats and its bitter hostility to Gov. Pattison, of the failure of the legislature to pass apportionment bills. The Times' abuse of the House is becoming monotonous and we hope it may turn its batteries upon Tom Cooper and the bosses, just for variety and amusement. It says:

The whole question can be very briefly stated. First, the Governor is responsible for the extra session, as he called it in disregard of all precedents and in disregard of the fierce denunciation of like sessions by the Patriot and the whole Democratic press only one year before. Second, the Republican Senate refused to accede to fair apportionments for the Democrats, and so declared their position formally, finally and unalterably, and they are responsible for the failure of apportionments. Third, the Democratic House persisted in a costly, suicidal $3,000 a day continuance of the session, for nearly three months after the absolute failure of apportionments was admitted by all sides, and they are responsible for the ludicrous and profligate farce that has been run for the ten-dollar-a-day galleries.

Colored voters become restive.

A mass State Convention of colored voters, held recently in Columbus, Ohio, to elect delegates to the colored national convention at Louisville, was captured by the Democrats. It was afterwards captured and re-organized by the Republicans, whereupon the Democratic element bolted and two conventions were held. The bolters appointed four delegates to the national convention and adopted resolutions condemning the Republicans. The other convention appointed no delegates, but adopted Republican resolutions.

Two Dollars a Minute.

The republican senate held a session yesterday morning and adjourned until Friday.

The ultimatum senators as usual worked hard for their money.

A representative of this journal timed the session and discovered that from the time the body was called to order until the gavel fell for adjournment just seventeen and one half minutes had elapsed.

If each senator gets thirty-five dollars for yesterday's work he will be paid at the rate of two dollars a minute.

This is the rate at which the people are paying for having their right of Equal Representation refused them by the republican ultimatum senators under the lead of Boss Cooper.—Patriot.

The Ready Reference Tax Receipt Book, with Summary Index Arranged for Ten Years. By a Country Editor.

THE READY REFERENCE TAX RECEIPT BOOK will commend itself to practical business men at sight Its forms are so concise and plain that all may readily understand and use them. The Summary Index will show at a glance the increase or decrease of assessed valuation and taxes from year to year for a period of ten years.

Every taxable citizen, and especially every voter, should make it a rule to take receipts for all taxes paid. This is not only prudent on business principles, but actually necessary in order to enjoy the continued right to vote. It is also a matter of no small consideration to have all tax receipts for a series of years together in convenient form for reference and comparison.

For sale at the JOURNAL STORE and by the trade generally. Price 40 cents.

General Hancock's Illness not Serious.

NEW YORK, September 27.—To a reporter who inquired at General Hancock's house on Governor's Island as to the condition of that gentleman the response was made that reports of his being seriously ill were not correct. It was said that he was recovering from the effects of the accident to his knee, recently sustained, and would soon be about, as usual.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 4., 1883.

BY DEININGER & BUMILLER.

LOCAL DEPARTMENT.

—The sour-Kraut crop in these parts is just splendid.

—"Fixing" the stove pipe is next on the domestic programme. Ugh!

—Go to D. I. Brown for good, home-made tinware and stove pipe.

—Uncle Johnny Long last week bought Daniel Garey's homestead at Elkton.

—Nothing but herbs, roots and seeds enter in the composition of Smith's German Olio.

—This latitude and longitude had a pretty emphatic thundergust last Friday evening.

—Go to D. I. Brown and see his fine No. 1 parlor stoves and heaters—the best in the world.

—The Farmers' Mills Band will give a grand picnic and festival at Penn Cave next Saturday.

—The colored brethren of Bellefonte are trying hard to organize a band. Hope they may succeed.

—High Constable Bartholomew broke ground on Monday morning bright and early for his new mansion.

—D. I. Brown has the exclusive right for this side of the county to sell the beautiful Belmont stoves.

—FOR SALE. A first class new organ for sale cheap. Inquire of C. F. Gephart.

—Dr. Stam sold his property on Main street to Mr. Yoney Kreamer, for $1900. The doctor talks of going west.

—The weather was cloudy and gloomy on Saturday, but few people in town, comparatively, and business rather dull.

—Mrs. David Whitmer, of Judah, Wisconsin, is now at Rebersburg visiting her aged mother, Mrs. Corman and other friends.

—D. I. Brown has opened his Oyster Parlor where you can get the best of oysters at all times. Tables ready at all hours of the day and evening.

—Bellefonte is enjoying a bigger building boom than it ever did before. Many fine private residences as well as some public buildings are being built.

—If you owe us anything on subscription, please pay up, sock up, book up! We need money every day—often several times a day, to build our new office, you know. tf

—The Watchman editor has been told that the Bellefonte, Lemont & Nittany Valley railroad is positively to be built. All right—but tell us also when, brother Meek.

ANOTHER.—Our jolly High Constable, E. Bartholomew, is going to build himself a house, on Penn street, forthwith. J. W. Snook is the contractor and work is to begin at once.

—Our young friend Mr. George R. Rhymestine who for several years made his home at Lock Haven, returned home last week with a brand new and "very handsome young wife." Bravo, George!

—J. Wesley Gephart, Esq., of Bellefonte, was chosen President of the State Y. M. C. A. at its recent convention at York. This is a high but well deserved honor bestowed on a native Millheim boy.

—THE NEW AMERICAN DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE, based on Webster and other leading authorities, containing upwards of fifty thousand words, the cheapest book of its kind in the world, for sale at the JOURNAL STORE Price, $1.00. tf

—Our friend Mr. W. Frank Musser has returned from Ohio where he was traveling on business all Summer, and expects to take charge of the First Grade school at Aaronsburg for the coming winter term.

—Our band boys now have each a music pouch of fine, white glazed leather. They look starkish—the pouchse we mean—yes, and the boys. What next? Boys, Jumbo moves that now you get yourselves four, fine, big kohl-raben-pech-russ-tinten-schwarze horses dressed in silver-plated harness, for the wagon!!!

—The eighteenth session of the General Conference of the Evangelical Association convenes at Allentown, Pa., to-day. About one hundred ministerial delegates will attend. This is the highest representative and governing body in that denomination and directs all its affairs of a general character.

—Among our callers during the past week were Col. Shortlidge, Jas. H. Rankin and W. C. Heinle, Esqs., of Bellefonte, John Rymestine, of Selinsgrove, Geo. Rhymestine, of Lock Haven, Rev. John Kreamer, of Jewel City, Kansas, W. Frank Musser, of most anywhere and Prof. D. H. Rote, of Aaronsburg.

—Some chap who signs himself "Public" in a communication to lasts week's Watchman, is evidently real down mad at Prof. Wolf, touching the mode the Professor uses in examining teachers. "Public" goes for the Professor red hot, without however mentioning names. Daniel has the floor and we opine will be able to take care of No, 1.

—Hoffer's Time, Wages & Expense Book is the most convenient little arangement out for men who work by the day to keep their time and wages received. For sale at the JOUNAL STORE, price 15 cents. tf —MRS. E. J. BRUMGARD is now in the city buying her fall and winter stock of hats, bonnets and general line of millinery goods. Her customers and the public general are hereby most cordially invited to call and examine her stock and prices. A fine variety of canary birds also for sale.

—Miss Mary E. Strohm left the other day for Centre Hill, her home, to stay. Sorry to lose "Miss Mary"—and she is no less sorry to leave, but circumstances which are beyond her control, bid her go. She has been in this community for the last two years and has always sustained an excellent personal and professional character. All our people wish her well.

—Wm. H. Harter and Elijah Burd sold their Fowler property to John Geisweit last week for $5000, and reserve some 400 acres to themselves. These chaps make a "spec" of about $1000 each in the transaction. And this is the reason why Villyum's bay window is expanding so as we noticed the other day while he was lazily reclining in his buggy, conversing with brother Yoney.

GOOD ADVICE.—Our red-bearded brother of the Bellefonte Republican advises his readers to pay their taxes. Now this is good advice as far as it goes, but it goes only half way. Tuten is too selfish and spiteful to advise his republican readers to take receipts when they pay their taxes in the country editor's READY REFERENCE TAX RECEIPT BOOK. Alas for poor, human nature! But "such is life."

—We have frequently reminded our correspondents to send in their communications in time, and now do so again for the tenth time. To insure insertion the same week they should reach us on Monday but never later than Tuesday. Last week we had "Items" and "News" from Centre Hall and Penn Hall which came on Wednesday, when the JOURNAL was already more than full. We gladly publish every presentable communication, yea, are anxious for them; but they must be in time "and don't you forget it," friends.

—Our readers will again find the advertisement of Everett & Co's popular Bee Hive Store, Lock Haven, in this week's JOURNAL. They will all read it and we know that many will profit by it. Much of the trade of our valleys goes to Lock Haven, and our people always find the old, reliable Bee Hive about the best of all in that enterprising town to buy their supplies of dry goods. The goods themselves are all they are represented to be. The proprietors and salesmen are very obliging and strictly honorable, while the prices are absolutely lower than elsewhere. Try the Bee Hive for once, if you never did before.

TWO AGED AND PROMINENT CITIZENS DEPART.—Dr. William I. Wilson, for many years a prominent physician at Potter's Bank, but for the last few years residing in Bellefonte, departed this life at his residence, Saturday morning the 22nd ult., at the old age of 89 years. He was highly respected and beloved by all who knew him during his long life.

Dr. Wilson was the father of Mrs. Curtin, wife of Ex-Gov. Curtin.

Joshua Potter, another old and well known citizen of the county, residing near Linden Hall, died on Saturday the 22nd ult., in the 79 year of his age. Mr. Potter was elected and served one term as county commissioner, some years ago.

—PROF. WM. T. MEYER left on Monday for Shamokin, Pa., where he expects to continue to labor in his chosen profession as a teacher of music. Mr. Meyer is widely und favorably known, not only as an expert performer but also as an author and composer of music. Nor is this all. He is a gentleman of education and culture, excellent social qualities and has always sustained a good reputation and character. We sincerely regret to see Prof. Meyer leave us, and he will be much missed in musical and social circles. This community, where he was born and spent his entire life, gives cheerful testimony to his moral worth and professional skill, and hopes he may find an enlarged sphere of usefulness for his fine musical talents at Shamokin.

—On Monday last after a long, long absence, a long, lonely interval, that dear, venerable old friend, the "Daily Legislative Record, special session," again made its appearance at our table. Oh how happy we were, how profoundly grateful we felt to the Hon. Henry Meyer for sending it! We hugged and kissed the dear old chap, but soon literally devoured, every line and letter. Oh that there were no ugly editorials to write; no provoking locals to get into readable shape; no lying, nonsensical ads to prepare; no tiresome job work to do, what an interesting and profitable paper could be made up by publishing these fascinating serial stories in the Record, by our legislative solons at Harrisburg!

Yes, any other sin, either of commission or omission, may be pardoned our semlymen, but if they neglect to send the poor country editor his well-accustomed Daily Record, woe be to them.

We trust that hereafter it may be more true to its name and come every day, Sundays only excepted.

Crystal Wedding.

From the Ellsworth (Kansas) Reporter, Sept. 20.

Last Monday evening, being the 15th anniversary of the wedding of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Bright, quite a large number of ladies and gentlemen met at their residence on the evening of that day loaded down with refreshments, and presents. The party was a large and happy one. During the evening, Mrs. Bright, Mrs. Dr. Day and Mrs. N. B. McCammon executed several pieces of beautiful vocal music; the Knights of Pythias band were present and played a number of their best pieces. After a few words from Rev. Bright, thanking the many friends for their presence and valuable presents, the party bade the Reverend and his wife "good night," and with many kind wishes departed for their homes, all feeling that it was good to be there.

—Jas. P. Coburn, Executor, will sell at public sale on the premises, October 13th next, the large and splendid farm of the late Daniel Kreamer, of Penn township, deceased. This is one of the best and most advantageously located farms in the county. The land is of the best quality of limestone and the farm has an abundance or timber, water and good buildings. See posters. 3t

—The Union County Agricultural Fair began yesterday, at the beautiful grounds of the society, near Lewisburg. This is the 30th annual exhibition of the kind by our Union county neighbors and it is very generally expected to exceed any former fair, not only in the range and variety of exhibits and the literality of the premium list, but also in the attendance of the people.

Friday, the 5th, will be Band Day, and all Bands are invited to be present. Bands with instruments in a body will be admitted free, and a premium of $50 00 will be paid, as follows: Best, $20; second, $15; third, $10; fourth, $5.

Saturday, the 6th, at 2 o'clock P. M., will be a premium paid of $5 each for Bycicle Riding, Walking Match, and Foot Race. First premium, $3; second, $2. Not less than three to start.

Editor Schoch, of the Mifflinburg Telegraph, will print a paper—the "Fair Daily" on the ground and sell it at one cent per copy.

An agricultural fair is a good place to visit, and since our own society and its annual fairs have gone "where the woodbine twineth," many of our citizens will no doubt avail themselves of rail road facilities and excursion rates and go to the Union county fair.

—It is simply surprising to see what a large of amount express and even freight goods Mr. J. A. Limbert carries to and from Woodward and Coburn, via Millheim and intermediate points. It seems that nearly everybody has something to send or bring, and Mr. Limbert is just the man to do it surely, safely and cheaply. Patronize Limbert. tf

THE ENTERTAINMENT.—The Millheim Literary Society seems to be an assured success and its first entertainment on Saturday evening is highly spoken of.

The exercises were opened with music by our band, after which Rev. B. Hengst offered a very appropriated prayer. Rev. J. G. W. Herald, the leading spirit and president of the society, delivered a fine salutatory address. Mr. W. T. Auman's recitation from "Hamlet" does much credit to his industry as a student of literature as well as to his native elocutionary talent. Recitations by Miss Jessie Rhoads, Miss Eva Kreamer and Miss Lillie Eisenhuth were well received by the audience. The essay read by Miss Cora B. Reifsnyder deserves special mention. "Village School" by the class with Mr. John W. Lose as schoolmaster, was well performed and created much merriment. The good old way of keeping school was illustrated to perfection. "Jollities," by Geo. W. Harter caused a ripple of laughter which was kept up throughout the entire reading. "Tableaux" as represented by the society, Miss Annie Rhoads occupying the throne as queen, gave the audience an excellent idea of "Gypsy life in ye olden tyme."

"The German Emigrants in the West" was well rendered and received much encomiums. This act gave a true picture of the hardships and dangers of the early settlers and the costumes and habits of the Indians. Mr. John W. Lose and Miss Mary A. Lose acted the German settlers to perfection and Mr. W. T. Auman and Miss Mary E. Strohm the Indian chief and squaw equally well.

The songs by Mrs. J. W. Stover and Miss Ada Eisenhuth, with organ accompaniment, were finely executed and highly appreciated by the audience.

The Millheim Literary Society has the best wishes of this community. Let it choose for its motto, "Excelsior."

VENI.

—An obliging public is hereby most respectfully informed that when our doctors are not in their offices, our cashiers not in their banks, our merchants not in their stores, our barbers, watchmakers, tailors, shoe makers and other mechanics not in their shops, the editor of the JOURNAL seldom happens to know just where to find them. But if our friends and fellow-travelers to the grave wish to see the JOURNAL man on business, as for example "to subscribe for the paper," pay up subscriptions, buy a tax receipt book, bible, dictionary or anything else he has for sale, they will find him at his proper post, just where he ought to be, at all reason able hours, either in person or by duly authorized substitute.

—And now that the little country editors "over the mountain" have tacitly agreed to behave themselves the "editorial giants" in Bellefonte are beginning to pitch into each other at a Furyous rate. Don't boys, we are really ashamed of you.

—THE FIRST HUNTING ACCIDENT in this section, which alas proved fatal to the poor victim, occurred near Paddy's Tunnel on Monday evening. Samuel and Calvin Styers, sons of Mr. Luke Styers, who resides near Cassler's saw mill, were out hunting. Returning home late in the afternoon they came upon a rabbit crossing the rail road. The young men followed the rabbit into the brush and in the chase Samuel's gun accidentally discharged itself in a manner of which he can give no account, and the load—four buckshots—entered Calvin's right thigh, one of the shot cutting the femoral artery. The train came along soon after the accident had happened and took the wounded man to Fowler station, where he soon died from loss of blood. He was about 22 years of age and unmarried. Sad, truly sad, is the tragic death of this young man, by accident, by carelessness.

—THE SOLDIERS' REUNION AT LOGANSVILLE is spoken of by our reporter and others who were there as a very enjoyable affair, barring the disagreeable weather on Friday. In the forenoon the ex-soldiers and bands were formed into line and marched in best military style to Gen. Heckman's grove, where short addresses were made by Col. Harbach, Col. Meyer, Capt. Berry and Sergeant Miller, after which the body returned to town. In the afternoon the Lock Haven post G. A. R., headed by the Cedar Run Band, arrived and another fine parade through town followed. The column was formed in the following order: Rebersburg Band; Ceder Run Band; Lock Haven Post G. A. R., headed by a cannon drawn by six of its men; Millheim Cornet Band; veterans of the late war from Centre and Clinton counties. The officers were mounted on horseback. The parade presented an imposing sight.

In the evening the exercises in the grove were dispensed with, on account of the heavy rain, but the town was very lively. Sweet strains of music interspersed with the booming of cannon filled the air. In the Town Hall the new Logansville Post, G. A. R., was organized.

Saturday morning the sky had cleared and fair weather was in prospect. The people were aroused from their slumbers at an early hour by the booming of cannon and the rattle of musketry. Every body was soon out and ready for the festivities of the day. At about 9 A. M., the military and bands proceeded to the grove where soon a large crowd of visitors gathered. Order was called and the exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. J. G. M. Swengle. Addresses were delivered by Capt. Austin Curtin and Col. D. H. Hastings, of Centre county. The vast audience was highly pleased with the patriotic and very eloquent addresses of these gentlemen. At that time the Salona Band made its appearance on the grounds and discoursed some fine music. Dinner was then announced, and every one present was in a condition to do full justice to the ample supply provided for the inner man by the good people of Logansville. After dinner the reunion delightfully wound up with a sham battle in which the opposing forces were ably commanded by Colonels Harbach and Meyer.

The Logansville reunion was a full-sized success, notwithstanding the bad weather on Friday, and will be long and pleasantly remembered by all present.

SPRING MILLS ITEMS.

W. F. Reatich appears to be getting all the grain brought to market here.

The Grange Hall is to be complete by Decbr. 1st. It will be a fine one.

James Kennelly & Co. are erecting a building on one of Grenoble's lots near the rail road.

Geo. S. Leitzell has returned from Illinois. The west appears to agree with him.

D. W. Duncan, our new Post Master, is a very obliging official. (That's just what every Post Master as well as every other official ought to be, but what not every one is. We tip our best hat to the young man who handles letters and JOURNALS at Spring Mills. Ed.)

TUTT'S PILLS
TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.
From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect
ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.

FOR THE FARM AND HOME.

Sulphur for Dairies.

The Dairy says that sulphurous acid is a most effective antiseptic and anti ferment, and may be produced by burning sulphur upon live coals upon a shovel or a bed of coals carried into a stable with perfect safety. It will also be found an excellent method for freeing dairy rooms and cellars from the spores of mildew, which have a very injurious effect upon the milk and upon butter or cheese made from milk that has been exposed to them. In fact, from constant prevalence of these spores it might be useful be useful to make a practice of fumigating dairies occasionally, especially after a bad, damp spell of weather during the summer season.

Killing Weeds with Kerosene.

After trying all ways to exterminate Canada thistle and that next worst enemy of the farmer, plantain, says an Erie county, Penn., farmer, I discovered that kerosene oil is a certain remedy. Some may think my method tedious, but at best when you wish to get rid of a patch of either pest, diligent work is indispensable. Early or late in summer, when the ground is dry and weather settled, is the time to make the application. Take an old fruit can, solder on one side a handle, then whittle a pine stick round about two feet long; now dip the stick into the oil and touch the plant or thistle, allowing a few drops to run down the stalk; it will follow on down and cover every root if enough is used, and the result will reward any person who has pride in keeping from lawn or field two of our worst weeds. If the thistles are very thick, a few may escape, which you will have to kill another year, but at worst two seasons' work will whip them all.

Fattening Swine.

It is generally conceded that there should be no standstill period in the correct system of feeding, but that growth ought to begin with young pigs and be steadily and continuously increased until the animal is ready for the butcher's block. While everybody nearly accepts the "no standstill" system as correct in theory, most farmers in reality keep their pigs during the summer months on very meager rations, waiting until cold weather to begin feeding with a view to fattening.

Growers who practice the plan of making most of the summer season by regular feeding, testify to the decided advantage of this system. In very cold weather, unless the hogs can be well housed and kept at a temperature of about 60 degrees, what the animal eats goes to keep up the heat, and the food fails to produce the same amount of fat it would in warm weather. There remains no question but that it pays to provide warm, comfortable houses for swine during the winter season in rigorous climates.

The excessive fat gained by excessive feeding of fat-producing food is objected to by many consumers, who prefer a larger proportion of lean with the fat. The Live Stock Journal says on this subject that the hog is naturally a grass and root-eating animal, but in its domestication, being fed almost wholly in this country upon concentrated food, has come the habit of depositing this excess of fat. If young pigs are kept upon food that will grow the muscles and bones and develop a rangy frame they will, in the opinion of the authority referred to, possess so much muscle when half-grown that a moderate length of time in fattening, even on corn, will not pile on an excessive amount of fat. Pigs fattened in Canada partly upon barley, but largely upon peas—a highly nitrogenous food, yielding a large proportion of muscle—produce more lean meat than do swine fattened almost wholly upon corn—an excessively starchy and fattening food.—New York World.

Farm and Garden Notes.

Dust with air-slacked lime to avoid worms.

Oats are good for pigs. Mast makes bitter pork.

Do not plow thin soils in orchards Spread manures.

Cut off the stalks of flowers when they are done blooming.

One hundred bushels of shelled corn will shrink to ninety in the bin.

A burning log or any other light will keep away coons from cornfields.

Set plum trees in large pig pens. They will not be afflicted with curculio.

Ashes and soots are good to kill the turnip fly. Dust on when the dew is on.

Do not dig potatoes immediately after a heavy rain. Lying in the sun heats and rots them.

A Chance for Expansion.

A commercial traveller dropped off the train in a small western village, and upon getting into the 'bus, was driven about three miles to the hotel.

"Is this town incorporated?" he finally inquired of the hotel runner who was the only other occupant of the bus.

"No."

"Why don't you incorporate? If you did you would have a town bigger than New York."—Siftings.

A CITY'S AMBULANCE SERVICE.

How New York Provides for Accidents and Casualties.

To some of the down-town police precincts the ambulances are called often half a dozen times in a single night. It is then that the great crop of drunks is reaped and that nearly all the fighting and murdering is done. By day accidents to workmen and people in the streets engage the attention of the hospital surgeons. The ambulance horses stand all day and night in a Dutch cellar ready to turn out at a moment's notice. Under the driver's seat is a little drug store containing the essentials in emergency treatment. Frequently the call comes over the fire wires—twenty strokes of the bell and the number of the box where the ambulance is wanted. It starts from the nearest hospital. Rarely the ominous twenty-five notes spells out the message: "Send all the ambulances in the city," as it did the day when the Riverdale blew up. Then a race for life and death takes place from up town and from down town, for which all other traffic must give way. The ambulance, like the mail wagon, has the right of way everywhere.

In the fighting precincts, Fourth, Sixth, Eighth, Fourteenth, all below Houston street, the hours between 11 at night and 2 o'clock in the morning are usually the busiest, particularly on Saturday nights. On Sunday mornings the term is stretched a couple of hours till daylight in honor of the excise law. In New York satan works hardest when the churches are open, and idleness and rum are his tools. A police sergeant's life is not a sinecure in these precincts. His responsibility is great, and usually he is not willing to take chances. Too many fatal mistakes of judgment are on record. Any wound on the head or bad looking cut is cause enough to discard the doorman's surgery for the doctor's. If the "subject" is a prisoner or refuses to go to the hospital, the police sugeon is sent for. Unconscious cases almost invariably bring out the ambulance. The single word, "poison," added to the message from head-quarters spells at the hospital the sentence, "Bring the stomach pump, and hurry up." And they hurry. Not long since an ambulance on the way to the scene of a reported accident ran over a man on Third avenue, stopped to pick him up, and returned with two patients instead of one.

The sick-wagon, by contrast, comes at leisure. All urgent cases are for the ambulance, and it cannot refuse them. Transfers from one hospital to another can be made afterward. With sick patients it is different. Usually they can wait. They belong, as the case happens to be contagious or not, under the board of health or the department of charities and correction, if they have not the means to employ a doctor of their own, as they seldom have. The "sick cases" come from the tenements, the lodging houses and the streets. If the patient has been less than five years in the county he is refused by the ambulance and the sick wagon, and the emigration department's wagon comes after official delay of sometimes many hours to take the "case" to Ward's Island.

The recently established night medical service has provided a most useful and welcome expedient in such cases by putting into the hands of the police the means of bringing immediate relief, while insuring to the doctor his pay. Of the twenty odd persons benefited by the service in one month no one was able or willing to pay for the help rendered, but left that to the city at the rate of $3 a call.—New York World.

Poisoned Arrows.

At a recent meeting of scientists in Paris, an interesting communication was received from M. W. J. Hoffman regarding the methods employed by North American Indians to poison their arrow points.

The Comanches simply pierce the green shell of the "Spanish bayonet" or yucca angustifolia with the points. The Apaches (Cayoters, sic) bruise up the heads of rattlesnakes with deer's liver, allow the mass to become putrid, then dip the arrow points, and allow them to dry slowly. The Chinouns (Moquis of Arizona) irritate a rattlesnake until he bites himself, and then dip the point and a portion of the wood of the arrow into the blood of the animal. A wound with one of these arrows generally proves fatal in three or four days, and its action is much more rapid if the stomach of the wounded person is empty at the time the injury is received.

Another poison is obtained by irritating bees, shaking the hive, and then killing them when in this state with small branches bunched together. The insects are crushed up in a mass with mortar and pestle, and the arrow points are dipped in the magma. It is probable that the active substance in this case consists in the formiac acid contained in the bodies of the bees. This preparation does not cause death, but induces long continued sickness.

Another very active but not fatal poison is prepared from red ants. It produces pain in the pharynx, considerable swelling of the part injured, and sometimes delirium. The patient remains feeble for a month.

Roast owl was esteemed a delicacy in a recent Paris menu.

C. J. Dewey, recently in business in Montreal, is proved to be a swindler, and has absconded. His frauds will reach at least $100,000. The detectives are after him, and a large reward is offered for his arrest. He is supposed to be in the Eastern States.

David Moses, a slim, brown-eyed, good-looking stripling of twenty years, was married to Blanche Gray, a professional fat woman (she is but sixteen, however), in a city museum at New York. The bridegroom weighed 120 pounds and the bride 517.

Captain J. S. Harnsberger, in his speech at Harrisonburg, Va., welcoming the Union veterans from New England, held up a picture of Stonewall Jackson at the request of one of the New Englanders, whereupon there was an exciting scene. Cheer after cheer was given, and the veterans of both armies waved their hats as a tribute to the deceased soldier.

A tragedy occurred not far from Grafton, W. Va., which has cast a gloom over the entire community. Mr. B. G. Mountz, a prominent citizen of West Grafton, was startled by hearing a noise in the front yard, and, having been somewhat annoyed of late by petty thieving, he grasped a revolver and rushed out. On reaching the door he noticed the dim outline of a man's form in the yard, and, raising his pistol, he fired. The man dropped without a groan. The report drew the members of the family to the scene, and on approaching the prostrate form Mr. Mountz was horrified to find that he had shot his own son. The ball had entered his forehead about an inch above the left eye. The young man was a youth of much promise, and the remorse and despair of the father at the result of his carelessness were terrible to witness. The family is quite wealthy and well known.

LONDON, Sept., 26.—Several French newspapers are conducting a campaign against King Alfonso because they believe he will henceforth be an ally of Germany.

Washington Notes.

Congressmen who are dropping in about these times to make arrangements for the winter complain that houses are very scarce and very high. Houses within reasonable distance of the Capitol and the departments certainly do bring big rentals, and furnished rooms are also high. A hundred dollars a month is a moderate price for a parlor and a bed-room, and when it comes to renting a furnished house, $5,000 a year is reasonable. There are Congressmen here who pay more for the rent of their houses alone than their Congressional salary, and yet they do not stand much the better for it. David Davis, even when Vice-President, lived at a hotel which, while it was popular years ago, is now more noted for its past than its present. Senator Morton, who was popular everywhere, in society as well as in politics, lived at a hotel because he could not afford to do better, and never gave dinners or anything of the sort. Boutwell lived at a boarding-house even when a Cabinet officer.

Surgeon-General Wales, of the navy, has recommended to Secretary Chandler that the standard of eyesight at the Naval Academy be fixed at 11-20. The standard has varied in the past under different systems of physical examinations, but was never so high as it is now proposed to make it.

Secretary Folger has just rendered an important decision with regard to the construction of section 7 of the new tariff law relating to packages and coverings of imported merchandise. He holds that the cost or value of the outside covering into which goods are finally put for land and ocean carriage is not to be taken as a part of or in addition to the value of the goods, nor is the value of the goods to be considered as enhanced by reason of that outside covering having been put about them.

A Japanese Railway.

Our fellow passengers are well worth studying. First come the men of business going to Yokohama, as is their daily custom. These men are dressed in foreign clothes, and many of them understand some foreign language, English or German. They are mostly an intelligent looking group of men. Besides these somewhat foreignized natives, we have the real genuine native article, with nothing foreign about him excepting his hat. Hats are very generally worn, unless it is a rainy day, when they are left at home and the wearer goes bareheaded. The Japs are peculiar. On a cold, rainy day they go about with their skirts caught up to their waists, and the water all streaming down their bare legs. Their dress must be saved, even at the cost of some personal inconvenience. In the car we can see this native dress; a loose robe with no buttons, but folded over the breast and fastened with a sash. This is the dress of the men as well as of the women. Some of the dresses are very rich indeed, being made of beautiful silk. One-half is longer than the other, which allows for being pulled up above the sash, and then hanging down in front making a pouch. This is the pocket where nearly everything is carried. At the bottoms of the large, square sleeve there are pockets also. Suspended from the sash is a little box and a leather wallet. Sometimes these articles are exquisite and very costly. The box contains the tobocco pipe and the wallet contains the tobacco. The box is frequently made of ivory or bronze, finely worked. Japanese tobacco is very mild. The average American would disdain to use it. Mild as it is but little is consumed at one time. The whole amount of tobacco imbibed would not be equal to one puff of a strong cigar. But the almost universal practice here is to draw all the smoke up, expelling it from the nostrils instead of from the lips. Women smoke as well as men.

"How shall we stop the great evil of lying?" asks a religious weekly. It can't be stopped, but the evil might be lessened materially by abandoning the custom of putting inscriptions on tombstones.

Sewing-Machine Industry.

These remarkable items pour into our office daily. Mr. H. S. FULLER, with the New Home Machine Company, of Orange, Mass., writes, May 23, 1883: "I have used Hunt's Remedy in my family for over ten years. My wife was troubled with catarrh of the bladder, suffered intense pain in the kidneys and loins, and urination was accomplished with the greatest of agony. My friends thought that she could not recover. We tried doctors and medicines, and although better at times she would grow worse again. She was obliged to use the urinal as many as fifteen times in a night, and was growing worse daily. At this time my attention was called to Hunt's Remedy, and I concluded to try it; and after using one bottle she was a good deal better, the inflammation was reduced, and the water more natural. She began to gain in appetite and felt no pain in the back and kidneys. She could attend to her household work without pain, and this had been a great burden to do, even the lightest kind of work. After using six bottles she was completely cured. Since then I have had occasion to use Hunt's Remedy for kidney and liver complaints, and found it to be just as represented, and I consider it a most wonderful medicine. I would not be without Hunt's Remedy in my family; and I have recommended it to my friends here in Orange with equally good results."

The Doctor's Indorsement.

Dr. W. D. Wright, Cincinnati, O., sends the subjoined professional indorsement: "I have prescribed Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs in a great number of cases and always with success. One case in particular was given up by several physicians who had been called in for consultation with myself. The patient had all the symptoms of confirmed Consumption—cold night sweats, hectic fever, harrassing cough, etc. He commenced immediately to get better and was soon restored to his usual health. I have also found Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs the most valuable expectorant for breaking up distressing coughs and colds that I have ever used." Delicate and Feeble Ladies.

Those languid, tiresome sensations, causing you to feel scarcely able to be on your feet; that constant drain that is taking from your system all its former elasticity; driving the bloom from your cheeks; that continual strain upon your vital forces, rendering you irritable and fretful, can easily be removed by the use of that marvelous remedy, Hop Bitters. Irregularities and obstructions of your system are relieved at once, while the special cause of periodical pain are permanently removed. None receive so much benefit, and none are so profoundly grateful and show such an interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women.

Feels Young Again.

"My mother was afflicted a long time with neuralgia and a dull, heavy, inactive condition of the whole system; headache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No physicians or medicines did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters with such good effect that she seems and feels young again, although over seventy years old. We think there is no other medicine fit to use in the family."—A LADY, in Providence.

BRADFORD, Pa., May 8, 1875.

It has cured me of several diseases, such as nervousness, sickness at the stomach, monthly troubles, etc. I have not seen a sick day in a year, since I took Hop Bitters. All my neighbors use them.
